

LONDON (AP) — Sir Winston Churchill came home from the hospital Tuesday triumphantly flashing a broad smile and a V-sign to his cheering countrymen.

The old warrior was carried in a sedan chair from London's Middlesex Hospital where, with the help of brandy and cigars, he fought a 54-day campaign to recover from a fractured hip.

Hundreds jammed the street outside and greeted Britain's wartime prime minister with cries of "Good Old Winnie!" and "God bless you, Winnie!"

Light summer drizzle let up as he emerged from a private side entrance of the hospital.

Nurses and patients packed the hospital windows and craned over a rooftop parapet.

As he waved his big cigar at the crowd, the 87-year-old Sir Winston was lifted into a waiting ambulance.

Sir Winston broke his left hip June 28 in a fall in his hotel room while on holiday in Monte Carlo. Next day he was flown to Middlesex Hospital.

Sir Winston looked fit and beaming Tuesday. He wore a gray suit and bow tie. His gray Homburg rested in his lap.

There were cheers all the way as police escorted Churchill's ambulance through two miles of crowded London streets to his Hyde Park Gate home. In a car in from rode Lady Churchill.

Looked Fit

Sir Winston will convalesce in a specially constructed suite on the ground floor. It contains a bedroom, bathroom, dining room, and accommodation for nurses.

Nearly 1,000 people were gathered in the sedate and secluded little street to welcome him home.

Churchill raised his hat to the crowd, smiled and waved. Then, to an appreciative roar, he gave his famous V-sign.

Churchill stopped his attendants on the steps to pose for photographers.

Awaiting him was a mountain of mail and good wishes from all parts of the world.

Churchill arrived home at 1:10 p.m.—just in time for lunch of soup and rare steak. There was a family reunion Tuesday night.

Valor
Averts
Disaster

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The valor of civilians and Brazilian air force men plunging through blazing fuel oil to the rescue was credited Tuesday with averting a major disaster in the crash of a Brazilian jetliner.

Though some were badly injured, 85 of the 104 persons aboard the huge jet emerged alive from the wreckage Monday night. Thirteen passengers and a stewardess perished and five persons still were missing.

No Americans were aboard.

The Panair do Brasil DC8, carrying 93 passengers and 11 crew members, headed down a runway of Galeao Airport for a flight to Lisbon, Portugal.

Hundreds of friends and relatives watched horror-stricken as a starboard engine burst into flame and the jet, trailing fire, sped straight for the concrete seawall.

With its undercarriage ripped off, the plane crashed through the bulwark and dived into Guanabara Bay. Fuel oil blazed on the water.

"We ran pell-mell for the shore," said Jose Araujo, a cousin of a Brazilian passenger, "and expected the worst."

But they found the death toll relatively light. Most of the dead were Brazilians. One was an Englishman. Two were Russians.

The plane stayed afloat for a vital 15 minutes. This enabled some passengers to leap out and swim to safety. Nonswimmers crawled out on the wings to await rescue.

The heroism of Brazilian air force men who plunged through the blazing fuel oil saved many.

Convention Helicopter Crash Lands

TAMIMENT — A helicopter, chartered for use by the Chrysler-Plymouth Convention at Tamiment-In-The-Poconos, made an unexpected landing in the resort lake yesterday morning.

Bud Fisher, the pilot, took the copter up at 6:30 a.m. to pick up Richard Lipson, and ferry him around the 2,400-acre resort to notify convention members of a conference.

The copter developed motor trouble over the lake. Fisher tried to land the vehicle on the dock, but missed by a few inches and landed in the lake. Fisher emerged unharmed. Lipson observed the accident from the shore.

At 11 a.m. Thomas McDonald, a skindiver, attached lines to the sunken copter to enable John Meyers to pull it out with a crane. The black and white copter was taken to Bethlehem for repairs.

Fisher had been at the convention for the charter service since early Monday morning.

Next Needed Step

A bill to bar tax deductions for lobbying expenses was introduced in the Senate this year. A short time ago it died in committee, by the overwhelming vote of 13 to 3.

Whatever one may think of any particular lobbying activity, the Committee's action should be universally supported. Lobbying is one of the means, and a perfectly legitimate one when conducted on an above-board basis under the strict current laws, by which parties to a controversy can present their cases to the officials whose duty it is to make the ultimate decisions. It is, in a very real sense, a form of free speech.

Now the Senate should take a leaf from the Committee's book and move to outlaw a policy adopted by the Internal Revenue Service some years ago. Under it, a company or an organization cannot regard advertising and related activities which are designed to influence legislation as a deductible business expense. This advertising, in other words, can only be placed at a heavy tax penalty.

That is the case even when the subject of the advertising involves a life or death issue to the enterprise sponsoring and paying for it. The light and power industry is the prime case in point. As a matter of simple survival, it does and must fight the public, or socialized, power movement. Some of the leaders of that movement hold high official positions and, by virtue of those positions, are widely quoted in the newspapers and other media. Their views are made known, without cost to them, from one end of the country to another. But if an interested party wants to present the other side, in the advertising columns of a publication, the tax penalty is assessed.

A bill to remedy this totally unjust situation has long been in Congress. It should be passed, by voice vote.

Opinions Of Other Editors

Soviet Aim And Aims

The festive note on which dual cosmonauts Nikolayev and Popovich have taken Moscow in well-deserved triumph was broken only momentarily before their arrival by the belligerence of Defense Minister Rodion Malinovsky.

Marshal Malinovsky habitually plays the role of a heavy in the cold war—a figure upon whom the slings and arrows of the West may conveniently be concentrated. But despite his morality play type-casting (even his name sounds suitably malign), the Marshal and his statements should not be shrugged off in the West. *

The Defense Minister was applying the same kind of calculated psychological warfare pressure over the twin space flights that Mr. Khrushchev last year applied after his resumption of nuclear tests. The Western allies rationally can, and should, resist dismay at such mental pressure.

But they should not ignore the fact that the Russians' aim is improving rapidly. Sir Bernard Lovell has probably exaggerated the military meaning of the Soviet's new precision in space. But many Western scientists are concerned about the rapid advance of Soviet technique toward what Mr. Khrushchev recently called the ability to hit a fly in space. The antimissile missile warfare business moved a long step away from its "shooting at needles with needles in the dark" stage with the Nikolayev-Popovich flight.

The two cosmonauts did not succeed in making a rendezvous. Mr. Khrushchev has not yet swatted a fly in space. But his swatter designers are making uncomfortably rapid progress.

Western leaders have sincerely complimented the two cosmonauts on their dashing flights. They can now pay Soviet guidance system designers the quiet compliment of pressing Western rocketry specialists for faster emulation.

The Pennsylvania Story

Dilworth's Proposals

By Mason Denison

In this exclusive "The Candidates Speaks" series, Mason Denison has asked each of the eight statewide candidates—U. S. Senator, Governor, Lieutenant-Governor and Secretary of Internal Affairs—to express his, or her, views as to what they would "do" if elected, as in the case of the governorship: "As would—." What each has to say is presented herewith exactly as submitted—without benefit of any editorial blue pencil.

By Richardson Dilworth Democratic Candidate For Governor

Harrisburg — As Pennsylvania's next Governor, I intend to concentrate my efforts on the things we must do together to shape our state's economy to the new age which exists around us in our Nation and in the world.

Our great task is to spur the state's economic growth so that we have full employment and a full participation in a rising standard of living.

It is no secret that the old pillars of our economy—coal mining, the steel industry, railroading, agriculture—will no longer create and maintain enough jobs to serve as the foundation of our Pennsylvania economy. We want to strengthen and modernize these traditional and established sources of our past economic success—and as Governor, I will work to do that.

But we cannot turn back the clock.

We are moving into a new age—an age of atoms, jets, space, Telstars—and new forces—the European Common Market, the American Alliance For Progress.

I propose to move Pennsylvania into this new age, and to move quickly, so that events work for us and not against us.

I will be a Twentieth Century Governor. The Republican Administrations we have had for all but 12 years in this century have been Nineteenth Century Administrations—completely committed to inaction—and the opposition party has not yet shown that it is able and willing to meet the challenges of Twentieth Century life.

Stroudsburg and East Stroudsburg High Schools opened their 1952 football season with first-day games.

Cost of the State Highway building on Route 611 was estimated at one-half million dollars. The contractors had been idle for many months due to steel strikes and water conditions. They expected the building to be completed May 1, 1953.

Four new polio cases were discovered in Monroe County.

Contractors at Tobyhanna Signal Depot began installing the 10 miles of railroad track on the reservation.

A band concert was held in East Stroudsburg High School for the benefit of the Record Fund. This fund was to send The Record to all the men from Monroe County who were in the service.

Miss Ruth Black was named commercial teacher in East Stroudsburg High School. She had taught at Coolbaugh School.

Cpl. Morgan David was promoted to sergeant in Pennsylvania State Police. He was stationed at Mt. Pocono barracks.

HOW many remember when the Hon. A. M. Palmer spoke at the welcoming program of the women's "Liberty Bell?"

More Than 20

Jack Benny overheard this conversation at his favorite restaurant:

First lady: For goodness sake, there's Jack Benny.

Second lady: Why, he looks just like he does on TV!

First lady: And all the time we've been blaming it on our son!

Gerald Kloss, preparing a eulogistic article on Ogden Nash for a Milwaukee periodical, selected these as most typical of Nash's unique poetic flashes:

1. I sit in an office at 244 Madison Avenue

And say to myself, you have a responsible job, haven't we?

2. He who attempts to tease the cobra

Is soon a sadder man, and so on.

3. Affection is a noble quality; It leads to generosity and jollity.

But it also leads to breach of promise.

If you go around lavishing it on red hot mommies.

One sister says that if I continue to be friends with the one she isn't speaking to, our friendship will have to come to an end. I don't think this is right. What do you think?

DEAR SISTER IN THE MIDDLE:

DEAR SISTER: It's your sister's privilege to fight with whomever she chooses, but she has no right to force you to non-speaking terms with her enemies.

One sister says that if I continue to be friends with the one she isn't speaking to, our friendship will have to come to an end. I don't think this is right. What do you think?

Now A Subsidiary

By William A. Doyle
Q. I own 50 shares of Philco Corporation common stock. Is it true that this company has been bought by Ford Motor Company? My friends tell me to send my Philco stock certificate to Ford for Ford stock. How many shares of Ford stock would I get?

A. The merger of Philco Corporation into Ford Motor Company became effective December 11, 1961. Philco is now a subsidiary of Ford.

That merger was duly reported in major newspaper stories. That was big news. Philco and Ford informed their stockholders of the details. All Philco stockholders were sent "proxies" to vote on the merger proposal, which was approved hands down.

The terms of the merger called for one share of Ford stock to be issued for each four and a half shares of Philco common stock. Philco stockholders were instructed to send in their stock certificates and receive Ford stock certificates and receive Ford stock certificates.

Your 50 Philco common shares entitled you to receive 11 and one-ninth shares of Ford stock. The way things worked out, you would receive 11 shares of Ford stock plus $11.50 in cash.

Ford stock was recently split two for one. So the 11 Ford shares became 22 shares. When you exchange your 50 Philco shares, you will receive 2 shares of Ford, plus that $11.50, plus the dividends paid by Ford since the merger became effective. The dividends declared on your shares to date amount to $29.

The exchange is being handled through First Pennsylvania Bank & Trust Co., Philadelphia.

You can write directly to that bank or have your local banker or broker handle the details.

Q. When two strong companies plan to merge, what is the effect of the market price or value of the two stocks involved? Does one stock have an advantage over the other?

A. In the ideal merger situation, things work out equally advantageous for the stock of both companies. Companies merge for a variety of business reasons. But the result of any merger is (or should be) to form a bigger and better company.

Merger terms are usually pretty much along the lines of the market values of the stocks involved at the time of merger negotiations.

But if Company A has something badly enough, Company B might have to give a little. So the merger terms might be more to the advantage of Company A stockholders on market values.

At that point either the market value of Company A stock will fall somewhat or the market value of Company B stock would fall somewhat to bring the market prices of the two stocks into line with the merger terms.

Mr. Doyle will answer only representative letters of general interest in his column. He cannot answer phone queries.

'Spartacus' Opens Here Today

THE epic motion picture "Spartacus," winner of four Academy Awards, has been booked into the Grand Theatre, to open on Wednesday.

"Spartacus" has been widely acclaimed for its unique blending of a tender, intimate love story set in a framework of eye-filling spectacle. The Technicolor production stars Kirk Douglas, Laurence Olivier, Jean Simmons, Charles Laughton, Peter Ustinov, John Gavin and Tony Curtis.

Based on the best-selling novel by Howard Fast, "Spartacus" is set against a background of Imperial Rome in the last century before the Christian era. Described by Time Magazine as "A new kind of movie with spiritual vitality and moral force," it depicts the story of man's eternal desire for freedom. Its love story, told in moving and individual terms, is interwoven with scenes of titanic struggle between Roman might and a rebel army of slaves under the leadership of the gladiator Spartacus.

Directed by Stanley Kubrick, the Brynn Production is one of the costliest movies ever made and was filmed almost entirely in the United States. To recreate in Hollywood the splendor of ancient Rome, many shiploads of household furnishings, period props, 27 tons of statuary, more than 5,000 uniforms and seven tons of custom-made armor were transported from Italy's leading museums across an ocean and a continent.

Buddy Hackett is starred as Preston's sidekick and cohort in "Crime" with Shirley Jones in the starring female role of Marian, the librarian.

Also featured will be Hermione Gingold, the mayor's wife; Paul Ford, the mayor and the Buffalo Bills, a barbershop quartet.

The showstopper, "Seventy Six Trombones" has had two encores built into the film, to cope with the number of times it was encored in the Broadway production.

'The Gazebo' Well Received At The Pocono Playhouse

By Gloria S. Randolph

MOUNTAINHOME — Alec Coppe's play, "The Gazebo," is a mystery with a light touch and plenty of heavy handed comedy. In this week's presentation of "The Gazebo" at the Pocono Playhouse Zachary Scott gives a strenuous performance. His portrait of a high-strung mystery writer, involved in a preposterous plot, is vividly distraught.

Richard Poston's direction of "The Gazebo" accents activity. Scott's grimaces are his own but they fit in with the constant bounding back and forth across the stage. In small roles, Fred Miller, Marty Green, Bert Conn, Eugene Stuckmann and Stanley Hyman seem to be effective because of good direction. Patricia Mesavage, as a maid, is unimpressive in spite of direction. Only one actor, Sal Caruso, seems completely uncomfortable in his role.

The title object, a silly little summer house, is only incidental to the story, like the window seat in "Arsenic and Old Lace." In this case a Gazebo provides just the right note of absurdity. If you're in the mood for fun, you'll find this week's production of "The Gazebo" an evening of light entertainment. The mystery is not very suspenseful, but the story is full of surprises which are bound to evoke a great deal of laughter from the audience. On opening night the play was well received, once or twice the audience actually gasped with astonishment.

Why is the printed word
so important in advertising?

ANSWER: THE DAILY NEWSPAPER IS THE GREATEST ADVERTISING MEDIUM for many reasons. One of them is that it carries the power of the printed word. People believe in a message that is permanent; one that is written. They understand it better. Also, the newspaper because of its permanence lets the reader choose his own time for absorbing the message. And once put down it can always be picked up again. The message that lives is the message that is written in the newspaper.

The Daily Record

Just Between Us —

—By Bobby Westbrook

Ordinarily I hate sleepless nights, primarily because in the dark, molehills loom as mountains; a vague physical discomfort takes on all the symptoms of some incurable disease, the tasks I left undone assume the aspects of the labors of Hercules, and there seems to be no place to lay a peaceful worry-free thought.

Not so the night before last when the lightning and the thunder put on a fascinating display, more absorbing than most of the old movies on television. At times, the lightning flickered so fast that it was like watching a landscape lighted by the windows of a passing train.

At others, the flashes were so continuous that the whole lawn was sort of frozen in an unearthly light so bright you could see the rabbits like statues with green eyes, the individual needless of the spruce tree.

Fascinating or not, the net effect was the same the morning after: a strong inclination not to move anymore than was absolutely necessary. It must have been an inclination I shared with an awful lot of Glen Brook women because you never saw so many golfers deciding so unanimously and so quickly that the rain was going to last all day — so they might just as well start this tournament on Wednesday — and took off to spend the unexpected bonus of a free day at less arduous pursuits.

And I'll bet they didn't have guilty consciences when it cleared off to be a perfectly fine day. Judging by last night's sunset they won't have any such excuse today — and the punch party is on again, too.

Although I don't know why I make such a fuss over losing one night's sleep when I can lose a whole year without batting an eyelash. As so many of you so properly reminded me the flood was seven years ago last Saturday.

Speaking of floods in the first time in its history, the Salvation Army has had to ask the children attending its Bible School not to invite any more friends. They have 150 turning out and it is physically impossible to shoehorn in another one.

Cigar Smoker Named Jim Ranked As One Of Top Woman Lobbyists In Washington

By Heather McDonald

The Baltimore Sun Sun (AP) — Cigar-smoking, mink-coated Jim Akin is the congressional liaison officer for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Mrs. Akin is the first woman to hold this post, and the only woman among the 50 liaison officers in cabinet departments and independent agencies. Their job is to sound out congressmen on their feelings about the President's legislative programs. "I regard myself as the eyes and ears of the department," says Mrs. Akin.

The illusion produced by the desk sign lettered "Jim G. Akin" and the faint haze of cigar smoke is shattered by the small slim blonde woman behind the desk. Mrs. Akin says her unusual name, cigar smoking and husky voice, which deepens further over a telephone, had caused more confusion than the appearance of a woman in the ranks of the liaison officers.

"I Know Him"

"A lot of people get clear into my office before they realize that Jim Akin isn't a man," she says with a throaty chuckle. "It's easy to tell when somebody is pretending to know me. They always say 'Jim Akin.' Of course, I know him." She recalls one occasion when she was introduced to a congressman who promptly shook hands with the man behind her.

Daughter of a Texas millionaire, Mrs. Akin is called Jim — "because I had a disappointed father."

She points out, "In our family we regard James as a girl's name. My daughter is called James, and is known as Jamie." Her cigar smoking began because she once lost an election, she explains. "Now I smoke mild cigars because I like them."

How To Play Your Game And Publish It Too

By Roberta Fleming Roesch

Some people have a job where they can play games while they work, and one person in this category is Robert B. M. Barton of Salem, Massachusetts.

"It takes a lot of game-playing to get a game ready for the market," says Barton who, as President of Parker Brothers, Inc., publishers of games, has undoubtedly played the last round of some of your favorites before you've played your first round.

Game Idea

"If a person has an idea for a game," he told me, when I asked him the procedure for getting games on the market, "he can send a broad general description of his idea, a set of rules and a rough working model to a game publisher."

"Just a stated idea for a game is not enough, though," Barton emphasized. "To really get anywhere with your game, you must have the whole thing worked out roughly enough so that the game company can test what you have in mind. And your game will be in better shape to send to a game company if you have your family or friends read your rules and play the game before you send it anywhere."

Package It

"Then, when you're ready to submit your game for consideration, submit it in a box and be sure your name and address are written clearly on the box. Include all rules with the working model."

According to Barton, there's no need for an inventor to obtain copyrights, patents or the like before submitting an idea, since no information on submitted material will be made public without the proper arrangements.

Also, neophyte inventors don't have to worry that their game ideas will be taken by a publisher, because every reputable game publisher is painstakingly careful to avoid this situation. If the company is interested in doing something about the game, it will make agreeable financial arrangements with the inventor.

When asked to give some rules seem more popular than games planned for only two hands. But look at checkers and chess!

"Since you want me to cite a top example of a success, I'll point out 'Monopoly'. This game gained its real popularity by giving people the illusion of wealth during the depression."

Rough Model

"In the beginning, the rough model was a hand-drawn affair on a circular piece of linoleum, colored with samples of paint. The title cards were typed on cardboard."

"But as the game developed and caught on, it became such a success that after our company took it over — and we'd turned it down at one time — we got so many telegraphed orders we had to file the orders in laundry baskets."

"But to get back to formulas and rules, if you insist on some, tell your readers not to invent games that will run all night, that are too complicated to be fun and that will cost too much to produce."

How To Treat Meat—With Respect

Since meat, poultry and fish are very perishable, it is important not to keep them in the refrigerator, unused, for too long.

Maximum storage times, as worked by Michigan State University home economists are:

All fresh beef, pork, veal, lamb (steaks, chops, and roasts), use within three days.

All ground fresh meats (ground beef, pork, veal or lamb and pork sausage), use within one to two days.

Variety meats (heart, tongue, liver, kidney, brains, sweet breads), use within one to two days.

Smoked or cured meats (ham, bacon, frankfurters, sausage), use within 10 days.

Poultry, use within two days.

As soon as you get meat home from the market, store it loosely wrapped in the coldest part of the refrigerator.

At first there were real flowers, but visitors liked them too well and they disappeared, she says.

"It was too great an expense, and these wrought iron flowers are lovely and can be repainted when necessary."

Zany Italian Knits Star At Luring The Lire

By Jean Sprain Wilson

Florence (AP) — Pizza may be everybody's dish here, but knitwear is the bread and butter of the Italian fashion industry.

Whatever kind of luck the season's haute couture collections have at luring the lire, those colorful, imaginative, even zany, knit boutiques always get the Yankee dollars.

Rose Bowl Game To Continue

Big Ten, West Group Okay New Contract

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN
Associated Press Sports Writer
CHICAGO (AP)—The Big Ten and the Athletic Association of Western Universities formally bonded themselves with a continuous Rose Bowl game football contract Tuesday.

The contract has no fixed term of years to run, but either party may cancel it by giving two years notice.

The signing climaxed nearly two years of maneuvering by the Big Ten to marshal the required majority vote from its membership to put the New Year's Day spectacle in Pasadena back on a contract basis.

The pact, first signed for

Keough's HR Aids Redlegs To 2-0 Win

CHICAGO (AP)—Marty Keough's two-run, inside-the-park homer in the eighth inning and the four-hit pitching of Jim Maloney gave the Cincinnati Reds a 2-0 victory over the Chicago Cubs Tuesday.

Maloney and Don Cardwell, who had a string of 17 scoreless innings going into the eighth, were locked in a pitching duel until Leo Cardenas opened the eighth with a single—his third hit of the game. Keough failed in an attempt to bunt the first pitch and then took a called strike before sending a sinking liner to right field. George Altman attempted to make a shoestring catch but the ball rolled all the way to the right field wall with both runners scoring.

Maloney, a 22-year-old right-hander, picked up his eighth victory against four defeats while Cardwell suffered his 12th setback against six triumphs.

Player Was Ineligible; Lose 5 Games

NEW YORK (AP)—The Richmonds were awarded two victories and the Columbus Jets one Tuesday while three defeats were tacked onto Buffalo's record as a result of the Bisons' use of an ineligible player in five International League baseball games.

Thomas H. Richardson, the IL president, upheld the Columbus protest which charged that Lee Alia, Buffalo infielder, was ineligible under the league's player limit regulation. Alia was removed from the Bisons' active roster Aug. 9 and returned to the list three days later. The circuit's rules state that an inactive player must remain off the active list for a minimum of 10 days.

Buffalo defeated Columbus 3-0 in the second game of an Aug. 12 doubleheader and beat Richmond 3-2 Aug. 13 and 4-3 on Aug. 15. These games were forfeited to the team against which Alia participated. Alia also played against Columbus in the Aug. 12 opener and against Richmond Aug. 14. Both games were lost by the Bisons.

Richardson said that all records made by the players in these games will stand. The pitchers' won and lost records, however, will be deleted from the official averages.

Alia was placed on the inactive list after leaving the club without permission. He returned two days later.

Last Saturday at White City Stadium in London Beatty had clocked 3:56.5 in a phenomenal race in which five runners cracked the once impenetrable 4-minute barrier.

Three men bettered four minutes in a thrilling race staged before a tense crowd of 10,000 under perfect conditions in Helsinki's huge Olympic Stadium.

Jim Grelle of Portland, Ore., second in the London race, again gave Beatty the strongest run for it, finishing as runnerup in 3:58.8. Olavi Salonen, the Finnish champion, placed third in 3:59.1.

Beatty had hoped with good conditions and proper pacing from his American teammates to better the 3:54.0 world record held by New Zealander Peter Snell. But he apparently held off too late for his slashing final kick.

Two records, however, were equalled in the race. Beatty's time for the shorter 1,500 meters (the mile is 1,609 meters) was 3:40.8, tying the stadium record set by Hungarian Sandor Iharos in 1955. Salonen matched his own Finnish mark for the distance.

It was the hottest day of the summer in Helsinki—72 degrees—and there was virtually no wind. The fast red track was in perfect shape.

Ron Morris, the American champion from Los Angeles, won a pole vaulting duel with Finland's record-setter, Pentti Nikula, with a leap of 16 feet, 1 inch—equaling his best effort this year.

Nikula, whose leap of 16 feet,

2 1/2 inches last June is pending for recognition as a world mark, could get no higher than 15-8.

Morris previously had done 16-1 in the U.S.-Russia track meet at Palo Alto, Calif.

LEGAL NOTICE

An examination has been completed by the PLEASANT VALLEY JOINT SCHOOLS AUTHORITY, for the fiscal year ended July 1, 1961. The accounting procedures, accounting records and other evidence in support of these statements have been reviewed. This examination included all procedures and tests that were considered necessary in the circumstances.

In my opinion, based on this examination, the accompanying Statements fairly present, in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles and practices, the financial position of the PLEASANT VALLEY JOINT SCHOOLS AUTHORITY as at July 1, 1961 and the result of the transactions during the fiscal year ended on that date, and in compliance with the various covenants and obligations imposed by the Trust Indenture dated October 1, 1959.

How long did you wait before giving up hope and taking another job?

The Classified Department is happy to announce their new service to readers and advertisers.

This is how an applicant is chosen by the advertisers, he will call and tell us. Then the following day we will carry a note in our masthead (the fine print at the beginning of the want ads) just below the 'box' replies received yesterday' at the bottom.

Readers can watch daily for listings of jobs filled. This eliminates anxiety and 'don't know what to do' feelings. There's no waiting to see before taking advantage of another opportunity.
